Agents of the Department of Agri- Injunction Suit of Katherine C. The Difficulties of a Prize

BY JOHN M. OSKISON.

A number of inquiries have reached ward C. Peter, in the circuit court here, me as to when I mean to publish the has handed down an opinion dismissing prize-winning paper on the best way the injunction suit of Katherine C. to provide for old age. I have received over a hundred > ideas. If I could only combine them into a single contribution. That is embarrassment No. 2.

As the papers come in I sort them into piles, with a title of my own on top. One pile I have marked "savings banks," another "building and loan," another "insurance," another "investments," and so on.

A surprising number of contributors have described investment plans which they have followed to build up old-age funds. They show a good knowledge of mortgages on city real estate and on farms: they know the rules that ought to govern bond investments, and they are discriminating purchasers of stocks. A number of these must be considered as strong competitors for my little prize. married in Rockville yesterday by Rev. John H. Schooley, pastor of the Methdist Church, the home of the minister being the scene of the ceremony.

The county commissioners have appointed Richard Gray a constable for Barnesville district. He also will serve as collector of dog taxes.

A license to marry has been issued by the clerk of the circuit court here to Frederick Harris, twenty-seven years old, and Miss Mira Crist, aged eighteen, both of Washington.

they are discriminating purchasers of stocks. A number of these must be considered as strong competitors for my little prize.

Another group make an excellent argument for home buying, either through building and loan associations or independently. The "pay-cash" contributors have written sound sense to interest the cacquiring a farm to retire to in their later years number half a dozen. A few have made arguments for the establishment of an oldage pension system in this country, instead of telling me what they have done to meet the problem.

It is indeed a richness of counsel that I have drawn out. To all who have written I want to sav "Thank you." I hope to use in this series a good many contributions besides the one which seems to me the best.

What I wanted to find out most, in asking for contributions, was whether the people who read my articles are willing to think about this rather serious subject. The answer is thoroughly satisfactory. Not merely the aging.
